It is said that long ago, the sacred order of the Elden Ring, a group of research university professors who forged an alliance with the kingdom of Elden, drove aside the tyranny of the evil Kingdom of Aur and constructed the advanced Crystal Tower as a sanctuary to research enigmatic phenomena. However, after several centuries, the promise of possessing a dream of peace slowly faded. Before the day of the planned attack by the Kingdom of Aur, a tragic accident caused a discovery by the kingdom of Elden about a secret within the Crystal Tower. The Elden Ring was cast to the ground by the nobility as the research was immediately terminated, but certain members survived, and the secret was kept secret. After the death of the King, the heir takes over the throne of Elden with the promise of ending the war between the kingdom of Elden and the kingdom of Aur once and for all. At this time, the kingdom of Aur and the Kingdom of Elden are engaged in an all-out battle to the death in the Lands Between. The Kingdom of Elden possesses an ancient magic called "crystal power," which gives off an ethereal light, and the main weapon of the Kingdom of Elden is the Crystal Tower, the strongest magic crystal in the universe. The Crystal Tower has also created a level of imbalance between the land of the Elden Ring and the other lands. After this, the Kingdom of Elden declares war on the Kingdom of Aur as a preemptive strike against their central objective.

Wed, 28 Nov 2018 08:00:00 +0000 Note: These patch notes are up-to-date with terms and suggestions. The most accurate information is always found at the official website. In Patch 2.60, world quests that include a Dungeon object have been added. You can now select particular Dungeons and get Dungeons-exclusive drops in your Dungeon [Dungeon Entry]. For example, if you have obtained the Caster's Dream, you can select the Cindarcastle Dungeon object or Spider's Dream Dungeon object, and either of which will reward you with good items and experience points. These objects can be cleared once per day per character. Don't get too attached to the Dungeon object or items dropped there however. Items that have "marketable" values are only available in the Dungeon, not in the shop or on the Auction House. Note: The Dungeon object can only be accessed once per day per character. Q: What are the best ways to get started I have been playing C and C++ for over a decade now. Ever since middle school I have been fascinated by computer "rigs". I love retro computers, and I even had a Commodore 64 in my early days. To this day, I have yet to grow out of that mindset. I am currently working on an N64 project as a senior in high school. I used to use MS Visual Studio, now I use Code::Blocks on Linux. I've toyed with C# and Java, but C++ is my love. I love good APIs, and I am a firm believer that good APIs can be thought of as code gen with a team. As for what is best, I am looking for book recommendations as much as anything. When I was a kid I had trouble reading a book that wasn't a multiple-volume encyclopedia. So lots of community based books that are either freely available, or others I can get. I'm looking forward to your recommendations. A: Take a look at C++ Primer, it'll help you get up to speed quickly A: I suggest 2 books. Programming: Principles and Practice using C++ by B. Stroustrup (very easy and straight to the point). You can just download the PDF. And 2 other books that go deep into the topic without assuming anything on previous knowledge: Classic C++, Second Edition by Bjarne Stroustrup C++, 5th Edition by Bjarne Stroustrup, Scott Meyers, Anthony Williams Second C++ textbook will only help for books IV and V, but the first two are enough to get a grasp on C++, and those are really the important ones. They are really a must read if you want to understand the language. Using a large book like this, will really help if you want to start with libraries. For example, you'll see the difference between Vector class and the STL::
