Lightroom 5 is updating the panel layout with new panels for the Basic panel, the Develop panel, and for the new Adornments panel. Adobe has also introduced a new and improved Workflow panel, which now includes an Action list, a Library editor, and Filmstrip streaming. Aside from the great number of new features, Lightroom 5 includes a number of subtle improvements. The more detailed History panel now lets you control the playback of recent edits. Adobe has also introduced Activity history, which Adobe says gives it much greater flexibility in controlling the playback history. The Distance tool has been completely redesigned, and offers quick access to smaller sizes of the type of adjustments you would usually need to use a Selection Brush to manually make. There are also Smart Filters for adjustments that are now based on the type of content in the image. Adobe has included 3D files for use with the Lens Blur filter in this release, and new features are being developed to allow Photoshop users to edit and selectively manipulate those files in real time. Another new feature is the ability to handle the non-convex or irregular curve of a lens, meaning that Photoshop now handles non-planar surfaces. This means you can effectively adjust shadows in lens flares, and rotating curve distortions without having to use the Lens Blur filter. If you can read the email, you can get started with CorelDRAW Graphics Suite Pro X6. Finding a log-in and password to gain full access to the program is no longer the issue. Of course, CorelDRAW Graphics is a full-featured professional DTP however, the most common use of the app is for designing business cards (really!) and it's a wonderful place for those fortunate enough to have a designer within their own business. There are also a myriad of other options for creating and publishing documents, brochures, posters, and catalogs.
