Israel Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu is facing the election of a new party chairperson Thursday who can change his way of running the political party. "Slim," a former bureau chief for Israeli Yedioth Ahronoth newspaper, will officially take the reins on Thursday from MK David Amsalem, the newspaper reported. But sources say it is likely that former agriculture minister Uri Ariel will be the new party chairman. Get The Times of Israel's Daily Edition by email and never miss our top stories Free Sign Up According to Yedioth Ahronoth, Netanyahu and his aides who have been working with Tamir Yadlin to figure out a plan of attack against the new party chairperson, particularly regarding a possible commitment of veteran Likud MKs to return to the party.

Amsalem has frequently voiced his disapproval of Netanyahu's pro-settler policies. The new party chairperson will be both a party leader and a lawmaker. Netanyahu's right-wing Likud party suffered an unprecedented blow when 22 of its MKs left the party just days before the April 9 elections, bringing down the party's number of legislators to 40. But they now have a chance to reassemble around a new party leader who promises to not bring them down, Amir Ohana, a lawmaker with a Likud background, said last week.

“This is a battle, but this is a battle we have to win. A battle for the life of the party.
