Recall - Watch This Movie!

Description: Now they're a fugitive. Now they're a fugitive. As Clark Smith, once the world's greatest secret agent, and now just another corporate drone, John Spartan must team up with a woman from his own past. The original film had everyone's favorite fake mustache running about in the desert with his "screwdriver and duct tape". Quaid has a few nice stunts, some of which were cut out of the re-released version, but he still has trouble saying the word "total". The sequel, on the other hand, got the right balance between martial arts and - - er, snark. Although the first Total Recall was a three-time Academy Award-nominated masterpiece, director Paul Verhoeven introduced a couple of new weaknesses in its sequels, at least according to many critics. The first one is, as before, the script (which combines the weak elements of the original Total Recall script with a third-rate espionage script). While this weakness can be corrected, it is not simply the script that is flawed. The script of Total Recall is a terrible pastiche of the other elements of the movie. That, by itself, would be bad enough, as a bad pastiche can be a comical masterpiece.
